Daily Routine

- At work by 8AM
- Virtual meetings till 3PM
- Reports until 7 PM
- Commutes 45 minutes each way.
- Weekends are filled with errands.

Core Goals

- Mental clarity and stress relief
- Sustainable daily habits
- No gym required
- 5 minutes or less per session
- reduce "end of the day guilt"

Frustrations

- Apps assume 30-60 minutes free
- Gamified UI feels exhausting
- Starts Monday, quits Wednesday
- Gym feels wasteful
- Feels like a failure

Guilt Affirmations

- I know i need to move more
- I don't have enough time
- My schedule is too tight

Barriers to entry

- Back to back meetings
- Decision fatigue by 6PM
- Gym too far
- Commute exhaustion
- Apps are too complex

EXTERNAL

Says

- I'll start once things calm down
- I used to be more active
- I'm just not a gym person
- I walk to my car, does that count?

Does

- Sits 6 hours without standing
- Drinks 3-4 coffees for energy
- Eats lunch at their desk
- Takes elevator even for a single floor
- Stretches neck unconsciously

INTERNAL

Thinks

- My colleagues look healthier
- I'll have health issues by 35
- I've failed multiple routines
- Just tell me what to do in 5 minutes
- Even 10 minutes is a lot

Feels

- 8AM- Motivated, makes plan
- 1PM- Overwhelmed, plans changed
- 4PM- Stiff neck, back aches
- 6PM- Guilt, tired, resignation
- 9PM- Shame when fitness ads pop up

Problem Statement

Tolu, a 29 year old BDE who works 10 hours days, needs a way to move her body during work because by the end of the day she is too exhausted and she feels guilty about it.

The Insight

Tolu does not have a motivation problem. She has a design problem. Every fitness solution she has come across was built for someone with free time, equipments and energy which she has none of those. Thw winning app fits inside the broken gaps of her actual workdays.
